

The

Philadelphia

February 19, 1965

Editor:

Don Madaj

Ben Franklin

'PATHETIC PRESS' EXPIRES!

MADAJ 'SNOWED IN' DOLANSKI 'GIVES UP'

Part One -- MONDAY

Don Madaj was walking home from school with Larry Lette, and Duane, and Gordon Mikula.

On impulse, Madaj threw a handful of snow at Mikula's face.

A wild chase followed, with Madaj the pursued, and Mikula the pursuer. For a block and a half the chase was on, with Mikula slowly catching up on Madaj.

By the time Madaj started the

The 'Pathetic Press', rated by the 'Franklin' as one of its nearest rivals, has sunk into obscurity. The 'Pathetic Press' had not been published for a month and a half, until it came out for one last issue, last Tuesday. That issue did not contain the usual Dolanski humor and wit, but showed the signs of a dying paper. Darryl confirmed this also on Tuesday. (that the paper was dead)

The 'Pathetic Press' was at its peak about three months ago. At that time, Dolanski suggested that

continued on page 2

continued on page two